DATE: April 1, 2019

AUTHORIZATION(S):

SUMMARY

Issue for Decision

Should the Board of Regents adopt proposed amendments to sections 52.21 and 80-3.7 of the Regulations of the Commissioner of Education relating to student teaching requirements for teacher certification and the registration of teacher preparation programs?

Reason(s) for Consideration

Review of Policy.

Proposed Handling

The proposed amendments are submitted to the Higher Education Committee for adoption as a permanent rule at its April 2019 Board of Regents meeting. Attached is a copy of the proposed amendments (Attachment C).

Procedural History

A Notice of Proposed Rule Making was published in the State Register on December 26, 2018. Supporting materials for the proposed amendments are available upon request from the Secretary to the Board of Regents. Following the 60-day comment period under the State Administrative Procedure Act, the Department received several comments on the proposed amendments. An Assessment of Public Comment is included as Attachment D.

Background Information

The quality of the preparatory experience of aspiring teachers in New York State can vary significantly. In developing our plan under the Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA) to ensure that all students have equitable access to effective instruction, the Department relied on recent research which shows that the quality of the preparation that aspiring teachers receive is a key factor in determining whether those educators enter and remain in the profession.¹ There is also an important relationship between educator preparation and positive effects on student outcomes.²

New York's current field experience and student teaching requirements have been in effect since January 2000. (Currently, each candidate must do, at a minimum, two 20-day placements or a single 40-day placement.) Since then, there has been a national trend to increase clinical practice in teacher preparation programs. In 2010, the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education Blue Ribbon Panel report placed clinical practice at the center of teacher preparation, providing teacher candidates with the opportunity to connect theory with practice.³ The U.S. Department of Education, Council of Chief State School Officers, and American Federation of Teachers joined the call for quality clinical practice in teacher preparation programs.⁴ The American Association of Colleges for Teacher Education Clinical Practice Commission recently released a report to help the field develop a common understanding of clinical practice and stated that, “clinical practice serves as the central framework through which all teacher preparation programming is conceptualized and designed.”⁵

As a result, states are following the guiding principle that more clinical experiences—intentionally constructed in partnership between P-12 and higher education, and with a focus on quality in addition to quantity—are better in teacher preparation programs. For example, as of July 2018, Louisiana requires a one-year residency, with 180 hours of clinical experiences prior to it. Effective September 2018, New Jersey is requiring 50 hours of clinical experiences and 175 hours of clinical practice (225 hours total) prior to the full-time semester of student teaching. By 2015, 34 states had moved to require a clinical practice placement of 10 weeks or longer, including all of New York’s neighboring states.⁶

Accordingly, building on the recommendations of the TeachNY Advisory Council and the edTPA Task Force, the Department convened a Clinical Practice Work Group in June 2017 to explore current practice and make recommendations for changes if deemed appropriate. The Work Group was composed of members from the P-12 and higher education communities from across the state (Attachment A) and met eight times from June 2017 through March 2018 to develop recommendations for updating the regulations.

The Work Group developed recommendations, which were presented to the Higher Education Committee of the Board of Regents in May of 2018 (Attachment B). The proposed regulation amendments are based, in part, on those recommendations.

Proposed Amendments

The proposed amendments to Sections 52.21 and 80-3.7 of the Commissioner’s Regulations are designed to create greater coherence with other statutory and Department initiatives related to ensuring that all educators have the knowledge and skills necessary to meet the needs of all students. Specifically, the amendments further align the Commissioner’s Regulations with requirements related to the Department’s federally approved Every Student Succeeds Act (ESSA) plan.

Proposed Amendments to Section 52.21

The proposed changes to teacher preparation programs include:

- Strengthening the Department's expectations for collaboration between teacher preparation programs and their partner schools and districts by requiring them to establish, maintain, and review Memoranda of Understanding or similar collaborative agreements to systematically improve teacher preparation and the teaching and learning for all involved in collaborative clinical experiences;
- Requiring the student teaching experience to be at least a full semester (at least 14 weeks), full time, and in alignment with the daily schedule and annual school calendar. Candidates pursuing more than one certificate title, may complete two placements each of at least 7 weeks. The student teaching experience must be designed to provide candidates with opportunities to hone their practices in alignment with the New York State Teaching Standards and shall carry the number of semester hours required to obtain full-time status at the institution to ensure qualification for financial aid.
- Exempting certain experienced teachers from the 100 clock hour field experience requirement and the full-semester student teaching experience, and requiring that they instead complete at least 50 clock hours of student teaching. This exemption would apply to candidates who have previously completed an approved New York State teacher preparation program, those who hold a National Board certificate, and those with at least one year of effective teaching experience under a valid New York State or out-of-state teaching certificate. This change streamlines the regulations for already-certified teachers, which currently require different amounts of hours for field experiences and student teaching, depending on the certificate title.
- Strengthening the Department's expectations for both school-based educators (cooperating teachers) and university-based teacher educators (supervisors) by requiring them to participate in professional learning that focuses on the provision of effective clinical supervision. University-based teacher educators engaged in clinical supervision shall be involved in program development as appropriate; and have at least three years of full-time teaching or related experience in any grade, pre-kindergarten through 12. School-based teacher educators who work with candidates during student teaching must be certified in the subject area of certification sought by the teacher candidate or in a related area; and have at least three years of full-time teaching experience or the equivalent, in an educational setting, in the subject area of certification sought by the teacher candidate or in a related area; and be designated by the school or district as a school-based teacher educator; or be rated effective or highly effective in their most recent annual professional performance review.

Proposed Amendments to Section 80-3.7

Section 80-3.7 of the Commissioner's Regulations outlines the requirements for certification through the individual evaluation pathway. Currently, the coursework requirements for the individual evaluation pathway for certification are based on the educational study requirements for New York State approved teacher preparation programs, including student teaching. As a result, the student teaching requirement for the individual evaluation pathway for certification in Section 80-3.7 needs to change to align with the student teaching experience requirement proposed in Section 52.21.

The proposed changes to Section 80-3.7 would require candidates who apply for a certificate through the individual evaluation pathway to satisfactorily complete a 14-week, full-time, college-supervised student teaching experience. They could satisfactorily complete 70 full-time school days or 140 half-time school days as an employed teacher, provided that the employment must include at least one continuous period of no fewer than 35 days.

Timeline

The proposed regulatory amendments to student teaching described in Section 52.21 would apply to candidates who first enroll in a registered program in the Fall 2022 semester or thereafter. Therefore, the first cohort of students graduating from a traditional four-year program that will be impacted by the proposed amendment is the cohort graduating in the 2025-2026 academic year. Those entering a two-year master's degree program leading to an initial certificate will need to complete the clinical experience by 2023-24.

This timeline provides teacher preparation programs with sufficient time to make revisions, if needed, to align their program requirements with the proposed clinical experience requirements.

Consistent with the requirements for certificate holders graduating from a traditional registered program, the proposed regulatory amendments to the individual evaluation pathway outlined in Section 80-3.7 of the Commissioner's regulations would apply to candidates applying for certification on or after September 1, 2026.

In such instances, the programs shall require such candidates to complete at least 50 clock hours of field experiences and at least 20 days of practica or student teaching with students in early childhood, including experiences with each of the three early childhood groups.

ASSESSMENT OF PUBLIC COMMENT

Since publication of the Notice of Proposed Rulemaking in the State Register on December 26, 2018, the State Education Department (the “Department”) received the following comments on the proposed amendments.

1. Regarding the proposed amendment to require teacher preparation programs and their partner schools and districts to establish, maintain and review memoranda of understanding (MOUs) or similar collaborative agreements, the Department received the following comments.

(a) COMMENT: One Commenter expressed support for the proposed regulation change.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: No Department response is necessary because the comment is supportive of the proposed amendment.

(b) COMMENT: Commenters objected to the proposed amendment stating that the requirement will place a strain on colleges and universities, particularly smaller schools, because of the additional legal and administrative work required to draft, implement and monitor the MOUs. It was further suggested that the requirement to negotiate and enter into contracts will delay a candidate’s placement process.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The proposed amendment requires that an agreement be entered into so that all parties – preparation programs and partner schools – are clear about their respective obligations. This is to protect not only the parties, but also the candidates. The agreements can be as detailed or broadly written as the parties see fit. The Department believes that there are programs and schools that already have existing agreements and, therefore, this requirement should not be overly burdensome.

(c) COMMENT: One Commenter stated that the proposed amendment requiring MOUs should clearly articulate the responsibilities of the school and the institutions of higher education (IHEs).

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: Details about the specific responsibilities to be included in the MOUs or similar collaborative agreements were not included in the regulations. The Department believes that such details are more appropriately developed at the local level to provide flexibility to such schools/programs so they can be tailored to meet their local needs.

2. Regarding the requirement that the student teaching experience be at least 14 weeks, full time, and in alignment with the daily schedule and annual school calendar; and that candidates pursuing more than one certificate title, may complete two placements, each at least 7 weeks; and that such student teachers enrolled full-time in a student teaching experience will be eligible for financial aid, the Department received the following comments.

(a) COMMENT: Commenters expressed support for the proposed amendment increasing the required practicum for student teachers from 40 days to 14 weeks and permitting student teachers to retain their full-time student status, enabling them to apply for financial aid.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: No Department response is necessary because the comment is supportive of the proposed amendment.

(b) COMMENT: Commenters stated that the extended student teaching requirement will be too costly for candidates. Some of the commenters further argued that the requirement will disproportionately impact candidates of color and those from immigrant families and/or will negatively impact candidates with working-class backgrounds. Another commenter stated the proposed amendment will be difficult to meet when some candidates, particularly mid-career candidates, have to work part-time to support their families. Commenters further stated that the proposal will result in increased tuition expenses on top of the existing fees that they are already paying, as well as introduce further barriers to the teaching profession.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The Department believes that the 14-week student teaching requirement is essential, both to prepare candidates for their first year of teaching and to help ensure that candidates will receive the best possible educational experience. While the Department recognizes that a longer student teaching placement may be more difficult for candidates who hold part-time jobs, and may impose additional transportation costs, they would not necessarily be paying additional tuition or fees. Since 2002, the State University of New York teacher preparation programs have required the student teaching experience to be at least 75 days in length, which is equivalent to the full-semester student teaching experience in the proposed amendment and illustrates the ability for candidates and IHEs to manage potential costs. The proposed amendments require IHEs to be credited with at least the number of semester hours required to obtain full-time enrollment status, thereby making them eligible for financial aid. The Department expects that IHEs will work with their candidates on securing financial aid and arranging transportation, if needed.

(c) COMMENT: Commenters support the goal of improving the quality and quantity of hours dedicated to clinical experiences. However, the proposal to require candidates to complete student teaching experiences in two grade levels (and three in the case of Early Childhood candidates) would limit the amount of time candidates spend in each school. Short term placements will not allow the candidate to gain a full understanding of the curriculum being taught in each grade.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: While the proposal maintains the existing requirement that candidates obtain student teaching experiences in multiple developmental levels in programs leading to certification in certain subject areas, extending the student teaching experience to at least 14 weeks gives candidates more time in each placement, allowing them to have a richer set of experiences at each location and each developmental level.

(d) COMMENT: Commenters stated that the Department should consider requiring a full-year teaching experience which will allow candidates to develop critical relationships with the host school community. Commenters also urged the Department to consider other possible options to the 14-week full time student teaching requirement, including allowing schools to offer a full-year immersive program, but not necessarily with full-time hours. Commenters recommended that the Department consider a residency model similar to the one in practice in Louisiana, which allows anyone with a B.A. and not yet certified, to take two examinations, get accepted by a teaching preparation program, and receive a Practitioner License 1, allowing them to teach full-time while completing the program requirements.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The proposed increase in the length of the student teaching experience from at least 40 days to at least 14 weeks will result in some programs needing to make changes while other programs will not need to make changes. A full-year student teaching experience or full-time residency would require nearly all programs to make significant changes and possibly reconceptualize their programs. Programs are welcome to offer a full-year student teaching experience, but the Department does not expect programs to make the leap from 40 days to a full-year for the student teaching experience or a full-time residency at this time. Several New York State IHEs offer Transitional B and C programs whereby candidates employed full-time in a school district under a Transitional B or C certificate can simultaneously complete coursework and satisfy their student teaching requirement for the Initial certificate.

(e) COMMENT: Commenters stated that the timetable of the requirement is flawed. The requirement of 70 days of student teaching in one semester, preceded by 100 hours of clinical experience, would push the student teaching experience to the spring semester – when the school calendar is misaligned with most university calendars. Candidates will struggle to meet the required number of days and their school experience would be potentially focused more on preparing for the assessments than on practicing diverse student teaching strategies.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The student teaching experience would not necessarily need to be pushed to the spring semester as a result of the proposed amendment. Each IHE can structure their programs—including the timing of the student teaching and clinical experiences—as they see fit. In fact, candidates can begin their 100-clock hour clinical experience as early as freshman year.

(f) COMMENT: One Commenter expressed concern that the proposal will require candidates to complete a 14-week placement in one location. As proposed, this requirement will deprive the student teacher of experiences in demographically diverse schools. Additionally, there are supervising teachers that don't necessarily provide the best experience for student teachers. By being locked into a single placement, the student teacher may not get exposure to a range of quality teaching experiences.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The proposed amendment maintains the existing requirement that programs leading to certification in certain subject areas will require multiple student teaching placements depending on the program requirements for the particular subject area. Such requirements are outlined more fully in Section 52.21 of the Commissioner's Regulations. Through the combination of the 100 hours of field experience and 14 weeks of student teaching, programs can provide teacher candidates with experiences in a variety of communities with diverse student populations and different teachers. MOUs and similar collaborative agreements are one way to improve the matching process between candidates and their supervising teachers. Moreover, if a student teaching placement is not working out or meeting expectations, then the IHE and the partner educational setting can arrange for reassignment to a different placement.

(g) COMMENT: Commenter objects to the proposed 14-week practicum requirement and stated that Trade and Technical teachers are required to have a minimum of two years of full-time paid work experience in the trade being offered, thereby limiting their ability to complete the 14-week full-time placement. Commenter stated that the Department seems to have shifted its emphasis from a competency-based teacher education approach to an approach that is governed by clock hours and somewhat burdensome regulations.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: Candidates pursuing career and technical education certification by completing a New York State approved program certification need two years of occupational work experience for Initial certification. However, candidates can pursue career and technical education certification through other pathways that do not require less than two years of occupational work experience. In addition, candidates pursuing career and technical education certification have the option of pursuing a Transitional A certificate prior to the Initial certificate. This option gives candidates up to three years to be employed full time in a school district and simultaneously satisfy the student teaching requirement for the initial certificate.

(h) COMMENT: One Commenter suggested that the Department consider doing a pilot study on the efficacy of various student teaching program models before mandating the 14-week, full time requirement. Any program considered should include sufficient financial support for the candidates.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The Department would welcome studies regarding programs' student teaching experiences. Since 2002, the State University of New York teacher preparation programs have required the student teaching experience to be at least 75 days in length, which is equivalent to the full-semester student teaching experience in the proposed amendment. The proposed requirement is informed by the recommendations from the Clinical Practice Work Group and national educator and teacher educator organizations as well as trends in other states for candidates to engage in high quality clinical experiences, including student teaching.

(i) COMMENT: Commenter works in a teacher preparation program and fully supports the spirit of the proposed amendment. The program in which commenter works requires a full-year, but not "full-time", student teaching experience. A narrow interpretation of the proposed "full-time" student teaching requirement would require changes to the program, including the candidates paying for additional credits.

Commenter believes the inflexible mandate will likely limit the number and diversity of new teachers at a time when enrollment in teacher education is dropping rapidly in New York and might make it impossible for candidates to complete the program. This full-year program provides candidates with the valuable knowledge of what opening the school year looks like and allows candidates to continue taking classes or work flexible schedules. In addition, commenter noted that the proposed “time-limited approval for an alternate model” without any guidelines about what might be approved, or how much time might be granted, or the research evidence necessary to “adequately demonstrate the success of such model” makes it difficult to make a case for existing models of rich clinical experience with confidence that such models will truly be welcome or approved. Commenter would prefer regulation amendments that allow more time for teacher educators to work with the Commissioner on defining more clearly the goals of a clinical experience and measures for the success of a given teacher preparation program. Commenter would like to see some pilots approved by the Commissioner demonstrating the benefits of a 14-week full-time semester-long experience. Commenter takes issue with the regulatory impact statement published in the NYS Register, saying that it misrepresents the past 18 years of teacher education and clinical practice in New York State, the current state of clinical practice requirements in the United States, and the financial impact of the proposed regulations. Commenter estimated the cost of full-time student teachers donating their time and mentor teachers and college faculty participating in professional development, as specified in the proposed amendment. Commenter asks where the funding will be for the professional development. Commenter states that clinical practice requirements have been eliminated altogether as a license requirement in Arizona and Louisiana and New Jersey provide routes to classroom teaching that eliminate all, or nearly all, clinical practice. Commenter stated that the CUNY, SUNY and private institution staff will be required to spend hundreds of hours re-writing and re-registering every non-compliant teacher education program in the state. The one-time cost of this additional work can easily run into tens of millions of dollars, not to mention the fact that faculty will not be able to spend as much time with student teachers or their mentors.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The Department will review how to interpret “full-time” for the student teaching experience. In addition, the Department will consider developing goals and measures of success for clinical experiences. The Department would welcome studies regarding programs’ student teaching experiences. The provision of a “time-limited approval for an alternate model” of student teaching currently exists in regulations. The Department has successfully worked with IHEs on their proposed alternate models and the demonstration of the success of such models, and fully intends to continue doing so.

The regulatory impact statement published in the NYS Register stated that the current field experience and student teaching requirements have been in effect since January 2000. Although there have been many changes in teacher preparation programs and certification requirements since January 2000, the only substantive change in clinical experiences since this date is providing the option of a single 40-day student teaching placement for programs in certain subject areas. See Department response to #4c below regarding potential financial impact of the proposed amendment. Student teachers’ time during the student teaching experience would not be included in a financial impact calculation; student teachers are not serving as teachers of record in their classroom, and student teaching is considered part of their professional education, just as coursework is. Under the individual evaluation pathway, candidates’ experience as paid substitutes would be counted toward the student teaching requirement. The reference to Arizona licensure requirements and the Louisiana and New Jersey routes to classroom teaching is inapplicable to the proposed amendments. The proposed amendments focus on changes to the student teaching experience in teacher preparation programs and do not impact New York’s alternative teacher programs. The proposed amendments include changes to the individual evaluation pathway to certification to ensure that it is aligned with the proposed student teaching requirement in New York State registered programs. Consistent with the recommendations of the Clinical Practice Work Group, the Department supports continuing to require Initial certificate applicants to have student teaching or other teaching experience prior to entering a classroom. Under the proposed amendment to the regulations, the first cohort of candidates in traditional four-year programs that would complete a full semester or longer of the student teaching experience is the cohort graduating in the 2025-2026 school year. Candidates entering a two-year master’s degree program leading to an Initial certificate would need to complete the student teaching experience by the 2023-2024 school year. The long implementation timeline will give IHEs several years to revise their teacher educator programs, if needed, to incorporate the longer student teaching experience into their programs. The extent of revisions needed—and thus, the investment of IHEs’ staff time to develop and implement those changes—will vary by program. There are not any fees associated with submitting program registration paperwork to the Department.

3. Regarding the proposal to exempt certain experienced teachers from the 100 clock-hour field experience requirement and the full-semester student teaching experience and requiring that they instead complete at least 50 clock hours of student teaching, the Department received the following comments.

(a) COMMENT: Commenters expressed support for the proposed regulation change.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: No Department response is necessary because the comment is supportive of the proposed amendment.

(b) COMMENT: Commenter supports the exemption for experienced educators, permitting them to complete only 50 hours of student teaching experience. However, the Commenter does not support the Department's decision to maintain the current requirement of 100 clock hours of field experiences, with 15 hours devoted to understanding the needs of students with disabilities. Commenter states that 100 hours is insufficient to prepare student teachers for their first years of teaching and recommends that the Department consider requiring them to complete 150 hours of field work, with 25 hours devoted to understanding the needs of students with disabilities and 25 hours devoted to understanding the needs of students who are English Language Learners. In addition, the Commenter stated that field work should include training in analyzing student data to track student progress over time; instruction in small group training for students needing special accommodations; and attendance at IEP meetings, teacher team meetings and staff development meetings with faculty, which will expose pre-service teachers to the responsibilities of teaching, inside and outside the classroom.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: No Department response needed because the comments related to increasing the number of hours of field experiences is not related to the proposed amendments.

4. Regarding the Department's proposal requiring school-based and university-based teacher educators who work with teacher candidates during clinical experiences, to have at least 3 years of full-time teaching or related experience in any grade, P-12, and participate in professional learning activities, the Department received the following comments.

(a) COMMENT: Commenter supports the proposal requiring that school-based and university-based teacher educators have at least three years of full-time teaching experience before conducting clinical supervision. However, Commenter recommends that such experience should be within the last five years, so teacher educators have a good understanding of modern teaching practices and current teacher evaluation tools.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: The Department is not placing a limitation on when teacher educators should complete their three years of full-time teaching experience. By not having this restriction, schools and IHEs will have the flexibility to hire school-based and university-based teacher educators with strong backgrounds, who may have taken an alternative path professionally that would make their experience fall outside the past five years.

(b) COMMENT: Commenters recommended that the Department include a compensation plan for cooperating teachers who welcome pre-service and student teachers into their classrooms. One of the two Commenters further recommends that they be given 15 CTLE hours per pre-service teacher, and 25 CTLE hours per student teacher who successfully completes their required field hours or student teaching hours in their classroom.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: These comments are outside the scope of the proposed amendment and therefore, no response is necessary. .

(c) COMMENT: Commenters objected to the recommended changes requiring three years of full-time teaching experience in a P-12 classroom, as follows.

Commenters stated that the proposed amendment will have a significant financial impact on the faculty, students and cooperating schools. One Commenter suggested that the Department consider that most teacher educators are part-time contingent faculty that neither have the time or resources to enroll in additional full-time teaching or other related experience. Commenters recommended that aid be given to faculty for the cost of obtaining the required training, and to school districts for the expense of hiring substitute teachers or adjuncts while faculty are away getting the required training.

Commenters also recommend that the Department create a grandfathering clause for current, experienced university-based educators with clinical supervision experience. One Commenter noted that many faculty members are highly experienced teachers but have moved into higher education teaching. Therefore, to require them now to gain three years of full-time, P-12 experience is not practical. In addition, the Commenter stated that the expertise of the professional needed in each of the two sectors (P-12 and higher education) is completely different.

One of the Commenters noted that the “related experience” language is unclear. This Commenter stated further, that there is no research indicating that college supervisors who have three years of full-time experience are more effective in coaching and mentoring than those with less than three years of experience.

DEPARTMENT RESPONSE: Commenters stated that the proposed amendment will have a significant financial impact on the faculty, students and cooperating schools. Programs may have additional expenses to hire part-time university-based teacher educators to supervise student teachers for a longer period of time and transportation costs for university-based teacher educators, if covered. Programs may also have expenses related to full-time faculty workload assignments, such as supervising student teachers and participating in professional learning, and expenses related to school-based teacher educator remuneration and other compensation. While the Department recognizes that a longer student teaching placement may be more difficult for candidates who hold part-time jobs, and may impose additional transportation costs, they would not necessarily be paying additional tuition or fees. It is not clear what the costs would be for cooperating schools that accept student teachers for a longer period of time.

Although the Department is not aware of research specifically indicating that university-based teacher educators who have three years of full-time teaching experience in an educational setting are more effective in mentoring than those with less than three years of experience, the teaching requirement helps to ensure that they have the P-12 teaching expertise needed to mentor candidates who will be future teachers. The first cohort of candidates in traditional four-year programs that would complete a full-semester or longer student teaching experience is the cohort graduating in the 2025-2026 school year. Candidates entering a two-year master's degree program leading to an Initial certificate would need to complete the student teaching experience by the 2023-2024 school year. The long implementation timeline would give IHEs several years to identify and hire qualified university-based teacher educators, if needed. The Department will consider whether future regulatory amendments are needed for university-based teacher educators with clinical supervision experience who would work with student teachers that may be impacted by the regulatory amendment.

With respect to the comment about the perceived lack of clarity of the “related experience” language, the Department purposefully included this language so that programs could have the flexibility to hire university-based teacher educators who have three years of full-time experience related to teaching that would be appropriate for mentoring student teachers.
