SUMMARY

Issue for Discussion

Should the Board of Regents adopt the proposed amendment of sections 3.47 and 3.50 of the Rules of the Board of Regents relating to the authorization of degrees by adding the Master of Public Policy (M.P.P.) degree as a registered degree in New York State?

Reason for Consideration

Review of policy.

Proposed Handling

The proposed amendment is presented to the Higher Education Committee for discussion at the May 2025 Regents meeting. A copy of the proposed rule (Attachment A) is attached.

Procedural History

A Notice of Proposed Rule Making will be published in the State Register on May 21, 2025, for a 60-day public comment period. Supporting materials are available upon request to the Secretary of the Board of Regents.

Background Information

The State University of New York at Binghamton has requested that the Board of Regents add the Master of Public Policy (M.P.P.) degree to the list of recognized degrees in New York State. The institution also provided letters of support for the M.P.P. degree from two independent New York State degree-granting institutions.

According to the Association for Public Policy Analysis and Management (APPAM)¹, the M.P.P. degree award is “the professional degree for analyzing, evaluating, and solving all aspects of policy.” It is recognized in neighboring states (Pennsylvania, Massachusetts, and New Jersey) and in several other states across the nation. Programmatic accreditation is available to M.P.P. programs via the Network of Schools of Public Policy, Affairs, and Administration (NASPAA).

M.P.P. programs typically include coursework in quantitative and qualitative methods, including econometrics, public and/or administrative law, ethics, policy implementation, program evaluation, and policy analysis. M.P.P. programs may differ from Master of Arts (M.A.) and Master of Science (M.S.) programs by including intensive internships or professional experiences and capstone projects that are linked to the professional requirements of specific public service organizations or social problems, rather than research theses. Furthermore, M.P.P. programs may differ from Master of Public Administration (M.P.A.) programs by focusing on analytic methods rather than administrative systems and management.

Graduates of M.P.P. programs work in a variety of organizations and agencies in positions such as policy analyst, community relations manager, economic development director, executive director, and public relations consultant. The skills acquired by M.P.P. graduates, including data analysis, policy analysis, and modeling, are valuable in and transferable to a variety of settings, including domestic government agencies, private firms, and nonprofit organizations. According to labor market analytics tool Lightcast, for the five-year period ending in 2029, overall demand in target occupations for graduates of masters-level programs in public policy is projected to increase by approximately 5% statewide and 4% nationally.

In order to permit New York State degree-granting institutions to offer programs leading to the M.P.P, it is necessary to amend Sections 3.47 and 3.50 of the Rules of the Board of Regents relating to requirements for earned degrees and registered degrees.
